Skegness Academy welcomes new Principal to continue school's improvement

Skegness Academy has today announced the appointment of Todd Johnson as its new Acting Principal.

Mr Johnson is currently Deputy Principal at the Academy, led by Greenwood Academies Trust, and has worked closely alongside the current Principal, Gary Carlile, to drive the improvements at the Academy which were praised by Ofsted following a visit earlier this year. Mr Carlile is moving to be Principal of Stanground Academy in Peterborough, another school sponsored by Greenwood Academies Trust.

During his time as Deputy Principal at Skegness Academy, Mr Johnson has demonstrated his passion and commitment to delivering the very best education for all pupils at the Academy.

Mr Johnson, who will take up his new position after the Easter break, will work alongside the Skegness Academy staff team, the Advisory Council and Greenwood Academies Trust to maintain the Academy's high standards, whilst continuing to drive forward further improvement, ensuring that Skegness Academy delivers the very best education possible to its pupils.

Todd Johnson, incoming Acting Principal of Skegness Academy, said:

"I am delighted to be stepping into the role of Acting Principal at Skegness Academy. I am looking forward to continuing to work closely with all the staff, pupils and parents to lead further improvements and build on what has been achieved to date."

Wayne Norrie, CEO of Greenwood Academies Trust, said:

"Gary Carlile has done a superb job as Principal of Skegness Academy and I want to thank him for his work – he and Mr Johnson have led the school's improvement, as recognised by Ofsted, and Mr Johnson is the perfect person to continue the progress. He has the highest expectations for what every child can achieve and I am very excited for the school's future under his leadership."
